

Romanian run-off No clear victor in poll

An elderly woman of the Roma minority leaves a booth in Sintesti, Romania, having voted in the presidential elections, the first since the country joined the EU. According to exit polls, Traian Basescu, the centre-right incumbent with 34 per cent, and Mircea Geoana, his Social Democrat challenger with 31 per cent, will compete in a second round in two weeks. The government collapsed last month amid squabbling between the two-party coalition. Page 6
